

7. Mark Gionet's Lucky Strike Sign

Some of you may remember what "LSMFT" means. The corner tobacconist was once a feature of urban life. This one is located in downtown Dover on my HO Boston & Maine Western Route. This shop occupies the rear of a supporting structure from a South River Modelworks kit. The A&P down the street is from another SRM kit. The bakery behind is scratch built from City Classics wall sections. The automobile is a Sylvan kit. Details are from various sources. I can't really remember where the wall sign came from, though. Somewhere behind all that, the branch line diverges north and you could catch a glimpse of a local freight leaving town if you ran down the block. Photo is done using my iphone 11pro, awkwardly held. Mark Gionet
