

4. Bill Schultheiss' Vermont Railway GP-38

I love this photo because it ties the past to the present and it was a favorite railfanning spot for me when I was a kid and now as I return home as an adult. The former Central Vermont Railway (now Genesee and Wyoming New England Central) roundhouse built in 1923 is still in use and allows for larger engine repairs other smaller roads can't handle such as this Vermont Railway GP-38 (former Southern). The Vermont Railway is a testament to the will to keep railroading when all hope seems lost as it carries on the Rutland Railroad dream. The red VTR scheme contrasts beautifully with the Vermont landscape! Bill Schultheiss
